

On 18 September 2008 mX incorrectly reported (Just how safe are our night trains?) that the number of RailCorp transit officers had dropped in the past few years to about 400. This letter sent to the editor of mX was not published.

At last count RailCorp employed just over 600 transit officers, far more than mX's 'revelation' of about 400. And they are rostered over four overlapping shifts per day to ensure the network is patrolled 24 hours a day, 7 days a week.
